Statement on California Proposition 65

The California Proposition 65, formerly known as the Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986, was enacted as a ballot initiative in November 1986.

The proposition helps protect the state's drinking water sources from being contaminated with approximately 1000 chemicals known to cause cancer, birth defects or other reproductive harm ("Proposition 65 Substances") and requires businesses to inform Californians about exposures to Proposition 65 Substances.

Prop 65 only requires businesses to provide warnings if the products fall within the definition of a "consumer product". The regulations define "consumer product" as "any article, or components part thereof, including food, that is produced, distributed, or sold for the personal use, consumption or enjoyment of a consumer."

All products sold by Endress+Hauser are intended for industrial uses only and therefore do not require Prop 65 product warnings. Furthermore, Prop 65 does not require businesses like E+H to test its products and E+H has not done so. We trust that you are aware of your company's warning obligations for occupational or environmental exposures warnings considering this information

Endress+Hauser reserves the right to update and modify this communication, as it believes necessary or appropriate.
